ONGERUP MUSEUM Many thanks to all the contributors and helpers for this year's wildflower show. It was generally a great success with a few surprise bus loads calling in and many other very appreciative visitors saying what a wonderful little museum and how do we do it all ! We told them it was hard as our volunteers are getting less and some of our usual helpers this year were otherwise busy. So if you missed having a look at the museum or would like to give a hand come along on Sunday 27th October for a cuppa at 9:30 am and we are having a quick meeting and roundup of this year's show then curator Vicki will inform us about the new shearing display that is happening in the blue shed and other projects in the pipeline. There will also be a general busy bee to clean up the wildflower shed.

Where in Ongerup is this?????

Ongerup Primary School - What are we up to now!

Greetings all!

It has been an amazingly busy year with school audits, renovations, asbestos issues, hosting two Athletic carnivals and all the usual great work happening at the school. I must commend our staff, students and parents who have persisted and shown great resilience in these busy times.

As with all things time brings change. Mrs Curtin, one of our long serving Education Assistants has now officially moved on. On behalf of the school community I would like to thank her and wish her all the best. Mrs Dewar and Mrs Jansen have been doing a wonderful job covering this role, however, the position now becomes officially vacant and we are looking for a permanent Mainstream Education Assistant to work in our Joeys Room. If any of our locals are interested, the position is open in the Jobs WA website - please see the link below.

OCTOBER BOOK CLUB REVIEW 2019

MONDAY 14TH

THE NEED BY HELEN PHILLIPS.

Part domestic thriller, part speculative fiction, part psychological drama, The Need is a novel about Molly, a scientist and mother of two young children. When a masked intruder appears in her home and demonstrates an eerie familiarity with the inner workings of her life, Molly falls down a mind-bending rabbit hole. The evolving tension of the threat from the intruder is matched by mounting drama at Molly's workplace. She is a paleobotanist who has recently uncovered an array of peculiar artifacts at her fossil quarry. When Molly learns the true identity of the intruder, her personal and professional crises collide, forcing her to confront an almost impossible moral decision with far-reaching repercussions for her children. The book explores maternal love, loss, and what one human can be asked to do for another.

Monday night found us catching up with Judy Major, whom we haven't seen for quite some time. Six of us managed to make the trip this month.

What a disappointing read.....Only two of us managed to actually finish the book and they could not make heads or tail of it. It was just plain weird. We all found it hard work and could not understand the story. Could not work out if it was an over tired over worked mother trying to cope or if there was a deeper meaning. Most of us gave up. Consequently this book didn't score very well - think 2 was the highest.

But we had a great night. We discussed Dancing in the Dirt to some length. Caught up on what everybody was doing had a great supper and generally had fun. Thanks Judy sorry about the book.

Next month sees us going to Jill Bailey's on 11th November. We will have a 7-30 start as we are joining with the Jerramungup girls again.

May has kindly said she will hold the December meeting, she would like to hold a lunch time event on 8th December. with an 11-30 start. May will sort the menu and work out who is bringing what and will bring this to Jill's meeting. So Happy reading everybody - see you next month.
