The Gnow Diaries – The Yongergnow Malleefowl

‘Valentine! What are you doing?! I’m trying to sleep and all I can hear is you scratching around down there’

‘Juliet, you know I like to check out the news every morning and see what has been happening’

Juliet mumbles, ‘well not much happens around here’

Meanwhile, Monty is on the other side of the aviary wistfully looking out across the sanctuary, ‘One day I will leave this place and I will find out what is out there. I will go and explore the great wide world that waits for us’

Juliet rolls her eyes and tried to get comfortable as she mumbles to herself ‘we are never leaving this place’ then just as she thought she was settling back into a peaceful snooze the alarm was raised

‘quick, hurry, run!’ called Monty and Valentine, Juliet jumped up, ‘what?’ she called, ‘what is happening?’ ‘It’s those two-legged things again’ cried Monty, ‘Run!’

‘Oh is that all?’ said Juliet ‘you know they actually look after us’

‘But they are so big! Look at this one!’ said Monty

‘You mean this one bringing us food?’

‘Ooh does she have worms? I like those worms... ok... well if they bring worms...’

‘What a chook. I’m going back to sleep... wait, what is Valentine doing?’

Kids Club

Our busy clubbers honoured the memory of those who were lost to war by making Remembrance Day wreaths and laying them at the Ongerup Cenotaph.

A feast of fruit was shared after all their hard work.

It's Starting to Look a Lot Like Christmas...Spiders.

Have you ever been in the garden, or out walking in the bush and spotted a miniature Christmas bauble with legs? You might have encountered Austracantha minax, otherwise known as the Christmas or jewel spider, Australia's very own living holiday decoration! Some might say it gets its common name from the time it's most prolific, but where's the fun in that?

All about these beauties

These spiders are found throughout mainland Australia and surrounding islands. They're easily recognised during the summer months by their shiny black bodies adorned with patterns of white, yellow, or orange. Their most striking feature is the six spine-like projections on their abdomen.

Females are larger, measuring 7 to 12 mm in length, and brightly coloured, whereas males are smaller at 3 to 5 mm and dark red/brown.

They are skilled web builders, creating intricate, interconnected webs ~ 1 to 2 meters from the ground, there are often as many as 30 individuals in these aggregations. Interestingly, they add white silk tufts to their support threads, making them visible to larger animals and preventing accidental damage.

Christmas spiders may be a sign of summer and the holidays here in Perth, but why don't we see them the rest of the year? The answer is they're around but don't get those dazzling colours until they reach maturity, so much less conspicuous at other times.

Speaking of colour, it has been observed that later in the autumn months (typically from March to April), some Christmas spiders undergo a dramatic colour change, becoming melanistic - entirely dark brown to black in colour. It's speculated that darker coloration could allow the spiders to absorb heat more efficiently during the cooler autumn months, potentially extending their active period. 'The mysteries of these spiders, like other spiders, may continue to be revealed as the ever passionate but very few spider scientists record observations and do studies in the spiders likewise dwindling bushland homes.' - Dr Leanda Mason.

How to encourage them into your garden

As with trying to encourage any wildlife into your garden it is important to minimise the use of pesticides, as well as provide natural habitats and appropriate vegetation. Spiders flourish where there is good hunting, a diverse garden provides food sources and shelter for a greater variety of insect life. Remember, if there's no food for the bugs then there's no bugs for the spiders!

Happy Holidays from the Backyard Buddies team.
